Del. teens attend National 4-H Conference

Nine Delaware teens attended the National 4-H Conference held March 24-29 in Washington, D.C. They spent most of their time working on citizenship projects, touring museums and monuments and meeting members of their congressional delegation on Capitol Hill. The students were Megan Campbell and Joshua Vincent of Laurel, Stephen Galloway of Felton, Brandon Gouge of Newark, Michael Crilley of Odessa, Ashley Boyer of Rehoboth Beach, Montoz Hall of Millsboro, and Dajoun Sewell and Marlaina DeShields of Harrington.

Lewes, England, students visit Lewes, Del.

Band and chorus students from Lewes, England, spent the past week in Lewes, Del., as part of a "Lewes to Lewes" celebration. The visiting students were hosted by families from Cape Henlopen High School and Beacon Middle School. During the week, the visitors and local students performed free community concerts between trips to Philadelphia and Washington and other activities.

DSU plays host to independent film festival

Delaware State University and Serviam Media co-sponsored the Hearts and Minds Film Festival, March 23-25, featuring more than 25 films by independent filmmakers that dealt with issues of social relevance.
